Around the mountain lakes

Cooled by the breeze of the Petit Mont-Cenis pass, this route takes you on an adventure at more than 2,100 metres above sea level, under the majestic cliffs of Pointe de Bellecombe. Dive into the magical world of mountain lakes!

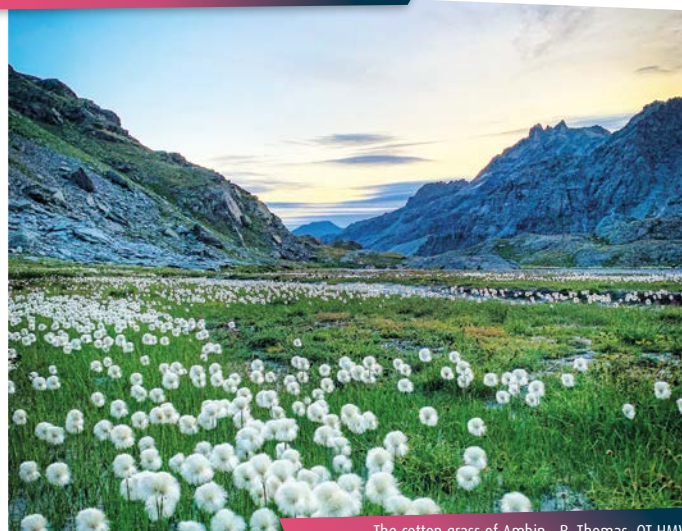

Along the way

This entry into the Savine valley is simply mouth-watering. The stream, born in the Savine glaciers, turns into a remarkable torrent as it thunders down the valley, to offer up its watery jewels, a handful of glittering diamonds for you to admire.

What a dramatic view of Dents d'Ambin and Etache Rock!

And what about these fascinating little delicate white pompoms that line the Perrin lakes, planted there as if by magic? Characteristic of mountain wetlands, cotton grass, or "linaigrette des Alpes" will make you open your eyes in wonder as its delicate heads nod in the wind. These silky, light grasses deserved to be photographed, but not picked. How sweet is nature, amid the jagged rocky outcrops!
