Provins

Comprised of an upper town and lower town, referred to respectively as Le Châtel and Le Val, Provins was a dazzling destination in the days of Philippe Auguste and Saint Louis, at the time of the famous Champagne fairs. Provins, listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 2001, features many places of interest: Caesar's Tower, the tithe barn, Provinois Museum, and medieval underground galleries that can be visited.

Porte de Jouy

This 12th-century gate has been recently restored. The entrance to the city was protected by a solid wooden gate and two wooden portcullises. It owes its name to the Cistercian Abbey of Jouy, located about 20 kilometres away in the forest of Jouy.

Caesar's Tower

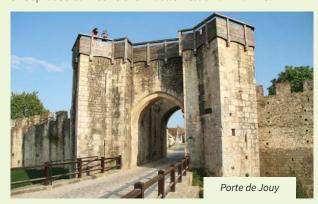

The tower was built during the 12th century by Count Henry the Liberal. In those days, it was the prisoners' tower, a prison for knights and lords. In 1433, during the Hundred Years' War, it was occupied by the British.

The palace of the Counts of Champagne

The wealth residence of the Counts of Champagne from the 12th century was very recently restored. It now hosts the Thibault de Champagne high school. It can be discovered from the raised Brébans garden.

Hôtel Dieu

Hôtel Dieu is located on the site of the former palace of the Countesses of Blois and Champagne. Under Hôtel Dieu, a vault gives access to the underground galleries, former clay quarries. The clay was used to remove oil from the wool of sheep used to weave the woollen cloth of Provins.

Access: Provins, 86 km south-east of Paris via D6, then N19, D319, D619.

Practical information: all shops, hotels and restaurants.
