Glacial getaway

Do glaciers appeal to you? Nothing can quite match this adventure right at the heart of Vanoise National Park, in the magical high-mountain atmosphere. Step into the realm of the Leisse Valley. A whole new field of possibilities opens up to you.

Along the way

After passing Plan du Lac refuge, a real favourite for hikers, venture into a valley sculpted by the Leisse torrent. To the sound of whistling marmots, the glaciers of Vanoise appear tantalisingly close and yet distant.

Make your way serenely across the alpine meadow, where herds sometimes graze.

Feast your eyes on the majestic peaks as you take a break at Saint-Barthélémy Chapel. Pointe de la Réchasse, Pointe Matthews and the prestigious Grande Casse stand guard with imposing authority. Nonetheless, Dent Parrachée and Dôme de Chasseforêt are not intimidated.

As you cross the Rocheure riverbed, can you sense the magic of snow melting into torrents? Fierce in springtime, already calmer in summer... Though the glaciers are treating, the torrents keep flowing.

Enjoy the tranquility of the mountain refuge for a food stop or a night at high altitude.

In this seemingly endless valley, how far could you extend your journey? Tignes to the north, Pralognan la Vanoise to the west... Give in to a spot of daydreaming.

The little extra

To avoid disappointment, remember to book your night in advance, because there are few places available and hikers often arrive in groups:
