What strange sculptures

What on earth is that weird rock jutting out of the pine trees like a finger pointing at the sky? Let's go and see! The path leading to this monolith is strewn with carvings, apparently dropped into the forest by some mischievous giant. Maybe you'll even come across him...

Along the way

Le Monolithe is in sight, time to cross the forest!

But this is no ordinary forest, it's inhabited by weird and wonderful creatures... One after another, a whole cast of characters sculpted by Serge Couvert take the stage, seemingly struck still mid-movement. Here's a family entwined together; there, a Moai straight out of Easter Island; a little further, a chain-shaped bench to sit on for a moment. Step into this world of sensory artistic enchantment as you go from one sculpture to the next.

Touch the smooth wood and rough bark of local essences, take in the scents of resin and sap. Admire the grace of these creations, so completely at home among the trees.

The little extra

As the seasons change, so does the trail, and you're constantly discovering new silhouettes.

This unique, inspiring experience is detailed in the leaflet you'll find at Aussois Town Hall.
